Consultant judgement combines direct observation with standard UX, conversion and front-end implementation practice.

Strong brand experience. Incomplete sales case.

The site earns attention and communicates a differentiated coaching philosophy. It does not yet give a cold visitor enough proof or product detail to buy with confidence.

BRAND PRESENTATION

Premium and memorable

8.0 /10

AUDIENCE RELEVANCE

5.0 /10

4.0 /10

PROOF AND TRUST

Evidence is too thin

Commercial readiness: suitable for warm traffic, not yet ready for paid cold traffic

Interest builds quickly. Confidence does not keep pace.

CORPORATE PROFESSIONAL

8 / 10 fit

What connects

The site understands time pressure, travel, low energy and repeated diet failure.

What blocks action

Still asks how much time, what support, what duration and what price.

WORKING WOMAN

6 / 10 fit

What connects

The female representation helps and the flexible nutrition message feels practical.

What blocks action

Needs stronger female proof, lifestyle context and clearer support for privacy and life-stage needs.

COUPLE

4 / 10 fit

What connects

The imagery suggests a shared transformation experience.

What blocks action

No couple offer, joint process, individual plan logic or couple case study appears on the page.

The site has a clear point of view

- | | | |
|----|---------------------------|---|
| 01 | Hero promise | The opening line differentiates Fitoholix from short-term weight loss offers. |
| 02 | Audience language | Calendar pressure, travel and failed diets speak directly to busy professionals. |
| 03 | Eight-step method | The process feels considered, personal and structured rather than generic. |
| 04 | Nutrition position | Flexible eating reduces the fear of extreme restriction and supports long-term adherence. |

Keep the cinematic tone and the coaching philosophy.
Build a stronger sales case around them.

P0 RELEASE BLOCKER

“TBC transformations” damages trust

The placeholder appears where confidence should peak. A new visitor may read it as unfinished work or an unsupported claim.

Developer action

Replace the card with a verified number. If verification is unavailable, remove the card before the next campaign.

Acceptance check

No placeholder copy remains in production. The published number has internal evidence.

EVIDENCE GAP

Text testimonials cannot carry the full trust burden

The copy reads well, but cold visitors need evidence they can recognise and verify.

- | | | |
|-----------|-----------------------------|---|
| 01 | Six case studies | Before and after photos, age, profession, timeframe and measurable result |
| 02 | Identity and consent | Real names or approved initials, client photo and clear permission to publish |
| 03 | Video proof | Short client clips that explain the starting problem and what changed |
| 04 | Audience coverage | Corporate man, working woman, frequent traveller and a couple if offered |

The philosophy is clear. The product remains abstract.

A visitor reaches the consultation button without knowing the basic delivery model.

CUSTOMER QUESTIONS LEFT OPEN

- 01 How long is the program?

- 05 How does the app work?
- 06 What does the program cost?

REQUIRED WEBSITE SECTION

Everything included in your transformation

- Personalised nutrition and training
- Home and gym workout options
- App access with exercise guidance
- Progress photos, measurements and habits
- Weekly check-in and plan adjustments
- Travel, eating out and maintenance support

If the current offer is the 100-day plan, name it prominently and use the same name across the website, WhatsApp and payment flow.

One core promise. Three clearer entry points.

01	CORPORATE PROFESSIONAL	Keep the current calendar, travel and energy language. Add weekly time requirements and home or gym options.
02	WORKING WOMAN	Add genuine female proof, lifestyle flexibility, privacy reassurance and only those health considerations the service can responsibly support.
03	COUPLE	Only promote this path if it exists. Explain individual plans, shared accountability, consultation format and couple pricing.
Current position	The site strongly serves corporate professionals. Women and couples remain implied rather than deliberately supported.

Built for people whose calendars do not negotiate.

Working professionals, entrepreneurs and corporate employees, generally between 25 and 45, who are done with quick fixes and ready for something built around a demanding real life.

Typography

Inter and Inter Tight create a clean editorial feel. Large headlines work well. Small uppercase labels and grey copy lose clarity over detailed imagery.

Recognisable and usable. The running figure feels more traditional than the premium digital coaching experience. Treat refinement as P2, not a launch blocker.

Developer actions

Render the hero copy immediately. Use a static poster for first paint. Lazy-load later animation frames. Reduce motion and frame quality for constrained devices. Measure on iPhone and Android over 4G.

Recommended target: mobile LCP below 2.5 seconds and no mandatory full-screen loader.

Start once. Properly.

A short consultation. A real assessment. No pressure, no template and no promises anyone should not make.

CONVERSION JOURNEY

The button works. The commitment remains unclear.

Current behaviour

The CTA opens WhatsApp with a pre-filled consultation message.

Questions before the click

Is the consultation free? How long will it take? Is it a call, chat or video session? What happens afterwards?

P0 before campaigns P1 during the next release P2 after the funnel is measurable

The website is visually ready. The sales case needs one focused release.

Before paid traffic

Remove the placeholder statistic. Add verified transformations. Define the product and app experience. Remove the blocking loader. Clarify the consultation.

Expected result

The same premium visual identity will support a much stronger decision: understand the offer, trust the proof and start the conversation.
